In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grows in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle by R. C. Hardwick, druggist.

The wife of John T. Godsey has given birth to a child that weighing one and one half pounds. The child is well formed in every way.

The man who stands idly by and sees the life fade out of his wife's face, sees her health going, sees her becoming old and faded and wrinkled when she should still be in perfect enjoyment of vigorous, useful health, is either less than a man or else does not know of the one remedy which will bring her back to health and strength. Perhaps her husband can not persuade her to go to her doctor, because she naturally dreads the inevitable "examinations" and "local treatment." He can persuade her if she needs persuasion, to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite prescription. This truly wonderful medicine has cured hundreds of women after the best physicians have failed. It has been in constant use and tested every day for thirty years. It isn't an experiment, there are no chances about it. It is a certain cure for all derangements, weaknesses, irregularities and displacements of internal organs peculiar to women.

WRINKLES NEW AND OLD.

How to Get Rid of Them by Very Easy Methods.
(Copyright, 1896.)

How to be beautiful is a topic that will win any woman's attention, and it is a pity that she is so often deluded by false teachers who pay little or no regard to the natural laws. The sooner women learn to assist, and not to fight nature, the better, and such is the secret of the science of face massage.

It is not necessary to go to a professional masseur. Every woman can banish her own wrinkles and restore her own plumpness of cheek if she will be guided by a few simple directions and patiently await the result.

Wrinkles are not always the effect of bad habits such as frowning, and the tricks of expression which distort the face, laughing, lying on the cheeks while asleep in such a way as to create them, but are also due to insufficient nourishment and relaxation of the muscles. The lines are not merely superficial, but penetrate the tissues beneath, which contain numerous nerves and blood vessels.

Recently, scientists have discovered a substance obtained from the wool of sheep, which has the property of a skin food, being absorbed directly by the pores of the skin, and supplying the lost tissue beneath. This has been used in various preparations under different names, but can be far more cheaply prepared at home by purchasing the lanoline and making the cream as follows:

To make lanoline cream, obtain half a pound of lanoline and half a pint of pure oil of sweet almonds. Then, putting a tablespoonful on a china plate, add an equal quantity of almond oil; mix thoroughly, and add from half a teaspoonful to a teaspoonful of tincture of benzoin, until the paste drips from the knife—a steel case knife is best for the mixing process—in about the consistency of very thick cream. All three of these ingredients are absolutely harmless.

The cream should be applied, preferably at night, and well rubbed in with the hand. To efface wrinkles as well as to nourish the skin, when the lines run horizontally across the forehead, rub up and down in putting on the cream; when they are perpendicular rub with both hands from the center of the forehead to the temples. Indeed, it may be given as an almost invariable rule in the practice of face massage, to rub in the opposite direction to that in which the wrinkles are forming.

Ladies who wish to give the face a thorough treatment begin, before applying the skin food, by making perhaps a dozen strokes with the palms of the hands from the center of the forehead toward the temples, pressing, but gently. This is to efface the perpendicular lines.

For the horizontal ones, place the tips of the fingers and thumb of the right hand, slightly apart, on the forehead just above the eyebrows, drawing the skin downward, and, with the fingers and thumb of the left hand, commencing just above the other fingers, rub the skin upward a dozen times.

For strengthening the muscles of the eyelids, go over the entire surface of the upper eyelid, taking up a small portion at a time between the thumb and fore finger and pinching very gently.

To preserve and restore the roundness and firmness of the cheeks, place the thumb of the right hand in the mouth, supporting the under surface of the left cheek, and with the four fingers of the right hand make a dozen rotary movements from the outer corner of the left eye over the cheek to the chin, moving the thumb at the same time inside the cheek in the opposite direction. Then put the thumb of the left hand inside the right cheek, and repeat the same movements. This may require a little practice, but will soon be easy.

For the chin, place the right thumb under it and, with the right forefinger slightly curved, rub the left side of the chin. Repeat the same operation with the left hand.

For the lines which form from the corners of the nose to those of the mouth, make lightly and firmly with the balls of the fingers a dozen strokes from the corner of the lips outward and upward to the ears.

Having thus done battle with wrinkles formed and forming go over the entire face, taking up between the thumb and finger as much flesh as can be grasped between them, pressing firmly, but not enough to bruise the flesh.

Lastly, with the flat of the hand, deal the entire face and forehead a series of slaps given smartly enough to make the face tingle slightly, but not too severely. No face treatment should ever be so violent as to leave the slightest bruise. The glow which, for some time, will be felt all over the face will prove the stimulus which the blood has received through the whole tissue of flesh, the best assurance that the flabby, relaxed muscles, being exercised, will retain their tension. The whole process need not take more than 20 minutes each night, and in a single month the results will be very perceptible.
